THE THIRD AUDITOR OF THE TREASURY .- It is proper for us to remark, in justice to all con-cerned, that it is now ascertained that the article published in this paper on the 6th instant signed "Quack Doctor," was not the production of a clerk in the Third Auditor's office. It is indeed within the knowledge of all, that the clerks in that bureau have no need to resort to anonymous publications on any subject, as their intercourse with the Auditor is always conducted in a frank and manly manner, and evils, if any exist, can be corrected without a resort to any insidious method.

The attempt, therefore, to raise a delicate issue between the Secretary and the Auditor has failed; and we may add that, but for Mr. Gallaher's magnanimity, the real name of the writer would be exposed, and he subjected to the contempt his unprincipled deception so richly merits.

America and the Old World.

We should scarcely be excused by our readers, and should certainly not be excusable to ourselves, if we omitted to mention some other evidences that our countrymen possess "a decisive talent for one art or science in particular." To enumerate a very great part of these evidences would lead us through the whole circle of patented inventions in our country, and require the labor of a lifetime. But we ought not to omit the vastly important invention of steamboats, for which the world is indebted to Robert Fulton, a native of Pennsylvania, and citizen of the United States of North America. This invention was as great a stride of improvement (we mean also as difficult) as Watt's improvement on the steam-engines of the Marquis of Worcester, Savery, and Newcomen. The idea of a forward propulsion, in continuity, by means of steam-power, was as difficult to realize after Watt's improvement, as his improvement after the inventions of the others. The genius of Fulton was adequate to this; and amidst a multitude of discouragements, and very general incredulity, he was successful in putting his scheme into operation on the Hudson river in 1807. In Niles's Register of that year may be found a most interesting account of this first application of the power of steam in propelling steamboats; at least the first anplication in which the steamboat was endued with powers of practical utility. We know of no individual of the Old World who has contested Fulton's claim to this invention; certainly non has done it successfully. In this very useful invention, therefore, an American has shown " a decisive talent for one science in particular."

From the propulsion of boats by steam or the smooth surface of water, the transition was easy to the idea of propelling a wagon, or some vehicle bearing a strong likeness to a wagon, by land. To produce a surface sufficiently smooth to allow the propulsive power of steam to take effect was now the great desideratum. But this was, in the actual advanced state of physical science, not near so difficult as to invent the steamboat. The locomotive followed therefore, naturally, the invention of the steamboat. Mr. Stevenson, an Englishman, has, we believe, the honor of this invention. Railroads will never supersede steamboats, but they will appropriate a large part, probably more than a half, of the inland transportation to

And in the construction of steamboats and locomotives, the Americans have shown "a deciging telent for these arts in particular." Their artizans construct both the one and the other with as much skill as any artizans on the globe. Who have built that fleet of steamers that now stem so magnificently the waters of the Pacific Who have done this in a time almost as brief as lovers' wishes call for? American artizans. Who have planned and constructed the railways greatest in extent in the world? American men of science have planned and superintended, and American artizans have constructed them An enlightened Emperor called the American Whistler to the northernmost corner of Europe to construct his great railroad from St. Petersburg to Moscow, and when he died, Brown, another American, receives and accepts magnificent (but not too great) emoluments to fill his place. The genius of Peter the Great submitted to toil under the tuition of the artizans of Zaandam, that he might introduce the useful arts into his country ; the sagacity and prudence of the present Emperor employ an American engineer to construct a highway for the commerce of his country, and the world approves the wisdom of the measure adopted by

We may confidently ask, who excel the Americans in the art of building steamers? Who surpasses their constructors and artizans in ship-building? Whence come those swift clippers that approach steam on many occasions in the rapidity of their voyages? Americans, by applying their genius to "a particular art or that of steamboat-building, that of steamship-building, or that of building ships under canvas, respectively, have achieved all these things; and it is not probable, by any means. that they will soon lose the genius and skill they possess in these departments of knowledge. There is no way, even, by which it can be practically diminished but by our yielding under the impulses of the mad ambition of individuals to the syren arts of European Governments. who would divide and conquer us, by inducing us to imitate their policy of frequent wars and oppressive taxes, or by splitting up into a num. ber of petty principalities and powers, like the small sovereignties of Italy or Germany.

With Union, under the compromise spirit of our fathers, and of our good and wise men since. our movement is onward and upward—both on land and ocean; on land, to subdue the wilderness, to spread a net-work of internal improve ments, to exalt education, to equalize and distribute the blessings of life by wise laws justly nistered, by forbearance, by kindness, by patience to redress in a good degree the evils which general laws cannot wholly remove; on the ocean, to send forth ships, whether moved by steam or canvas, freighted with the products of industry to make friendly commercial exchanges and cherish the good will of nation to to maintain the honor of that flag whose ted stars and stripes have been the emblem of victory in so many battles-to preserve by all prudent, just, and merciful acts and arts the peace of the world, if possible—to cherish and ustain the liberties of mankind, if necessary.

Another Warning.—The grocery store Mr. J. Pearce, corner of Seventh and I streets, was in imminent danger of being consumed by fire last evening, from the ignition of a cask of camphine oil. While in the act of drawing the liquid from the cask, it took fire from a lamp placed near it, and spread rapidly over the floor as it ran from the open spigot. A lot of broom suspended from the ceiling soon took fire, and but for the timely aid of the neighbors, who cast the burning materials into the street and furnished a supply of water from the adjacent pumps, the whole interior of the building would have been instantly enveloped in flames. One of Mr. Pearce's hands was badly burned in his efforts to extinguish it.

A law prohibiting the sale of this combustible material after candle-light would do no harm to the vender of it, and materially enhance the se- by capitalists in Albany and along the line. curity of life and property; for while it would prevent the possibility of accident in places where it is kept in large quantities, it would compel families who use it to make their purchases in the daytime, and cause the more general preparation of the lamps for use at the ROWDYISM .-- After the danger from the fire above alluded to was all over, the fire apparatus of two or three companies made their appearance on the ground, and "young America" began to show its prowess by inciting to belligerancy the youthful arm of two rival companies of that useful department. Stones were brought in requisition, and an old citizen, residing in the neighborhood, on Seventh street, received a severe cut above his eye from one of the flying missiles while standing in his store-door. This is fine sport for the boys, and will continue to be indulged in so long as they are suffered to 'man the ropes;" and the fire department should be made legally, as they are morally, responsible for all accidents and damage done in these disgraceful malees while such a state of things exists. The remedy is in their hands: and a strict prohibition of the active participation of youth in any of their duties would soon produce the desired effect. The "boys who run with the engines" are apprentices to crime, and few require a five years' training to make them adents in its multiform branches

TENNESSEE ELECTIONS .- We shall have to correct the account of the Tennessee elections which we published yesterday, if the editor of our Democratic contemporary, the Union, who has just returned from Nashville, be correct in his deductions on the subject. He states that William H. Polk, Democrat, beats James H. Thomas, Democrat, in the Maury District; and that Mr. Churchill, Democrat, beats Mr. Anderson, Whig, in the Knoxville district.

In this case, the Representative delegation in the next Congress will stand as in the lasteven Democrats and four Whigs.

There is a coincidence relative to the Gubernatorial elections in Tennessee, for the last ten or twelve years, well worthy of record: In 1837, Cannon, Whig, beat Armstrong,

In 1847. N. S. Brown, Whig, beat A. V. Brown, Democrat.

In 1839, Polk, Democrat, beat Cannon, Whice In 1849, Trousdale, Democrat, beat N. S. Brown, Whig.

In 1841, Jones, Whig, beat Polk, Democrat. In 1851, Campbell, Whig, beats Trousdale, Democrat.

In 1843, Jones, Whig, beat Polk, Democrat So, to complete the coincidence, a Whig must eat a Democrat for Governor in 1853.

The capital employed in the forty-two railroads of Pennsylvania (embracing one thou-sand one hundred and thirty-two miles) is $60,000,000, and canals (one thousand miles) $30,000,000.—Exchangs.

For railroads and canals, $90,000,000! What would that State be without these works? Money, for such avenues of commerce, can be bor rowed at six per cent. simple interest, and with the increase and prosperity of the country their value will increase at a compound rate.

NORTHERN LIBERTY MARKET-HOUSE .- It will be seen by the record of the proceedings on Monday evening, that Mr. Bryan introduced into the Board of Common Council a bill to extend the Northern Liberties market-house, which was twice read. This measure is not only desirable, but necessary, and we are highly gratified to know that it is about to be consummated.

We would direct attention to the advertise ment of a young man desiring employment as a clerk or salesman.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 19.—The Board of Health has reported the city free from cholera.

Education-Look to it.

The schools of our city are soon to re-open teachers are to resume their difficult, arduous and responsible labors, and boys and girls are to submit themselves to the restraints of the school-room, and to apply themselves to the great and important work of intellectual and moral improvement. Who can reflect upon these things without deep and earnest cor cern?-without regret for hours lost or abused and a sincere desire that the future may be more profitable than the past?

Let us see what schools are open to our ehildren. First in importance are the public schools

They are efficient, well governed, and eminently useful; and from them will emerge many of the best and most talented of those who are to occupy the high places in our community. We regret that no High School is yet connected with them; but this will be supplied at an early day.

Under the appropriate head in our column will be found the advertisements of many most excellent private schools, to which we would direct the attention of all who feel an interest in this important subject.

AN IMPORTANT PRODUCT .- It is stated that the manufacture of beet-root sugar in France is extending itself very rapidly. Thirty new factories, gotten up upon a very large scale, are enumerated as going into operation from the first of next month. They are located, with but two exceptions, in the north of France. The whole number of manufactories now in operation in France is 304, and their production in sugar during the season of the presen year is set down at 73,817,067 killogrammes or about 150 millions of pounds.

INSTINCT OF BIRDS .- There was once a bird that built its nest in a tree, where she watched over her young ones. She observed a serpent creeping along on the ground to the tree. began to ory loudly, and flew away, but came back very quickly, bringing in her mouth some ivy leaves, which she placed around the nest. She went backward and forward till she had filled the nest with these leaves.

The snake made its way up the tree; but, as it reached the nest and put in its head, it immediately fell back to the ground, and soon ex-pired. How the bird knew that this kind of leaf would poison this deadly animal, or dis-covered where to obtain them, is a mystery; but such was the case.—Mrs. L. N. Fowler.

SINGING .- All can learn to sing if they con mence in season. I do not say that all will have the sweet, musical voice of the nightingale; have the sweet, musical voice of the nightingale; for some have, naturally, sweet, mild, and soft voices when they talk, while others speak in loud, masculine tones. The same is true in regard to singing. But every one can sing in some degree, and thus breathe forth the feelings of the heart in song.

In Germany every child is taught to use its voice while young. In their schools all join in singing, as a regular exercise, as much as they attend to the study of geography; and in their HORTICULTURAL.-The enterprising gentle men who have already manifested an anxiety to form a Horticultural Society are to meet in the City Hall, on Saturday afternoon next, at one o'clock; and we learn that a general invitation to be present is extended to cultivators of the soil in this and the adjoining counties.
